Battle Los Angeles Dubbed Hindi Movie Free Download Torrent

After a meteor shower around the world, the governments learn that it is actually an alien invasion and organize counter-attacks. In Los Angeles, the Marine Sergeant Michael Nantz is ready to retire after a great trauma in the past when he lost all the men under his command in a mission. However, his platoon is assigned to bring the civilians that are sheltered in the Police Department, in an area dominated by the aliens, back to forward operating base (F.O.B.) before the bombs drop on the city. Sgt. Nantz assists 2nd Lieutenant William Martinez and they have to accomplish their mission within three hours. The marines meet few civilians and survivors from other commandos and when they are ready to fly to the base, the helicopter with the wounded marines is shot down and crashes. Now the marines need to reach the base with the civilians through the destroyed streets and highways using a bus. Along their journey, the marines learn how to kill the invaders but only a few of them survive. When the mission is accomplished, Sgt. Nantz and the survivors decide to destroy the alien communication center and consequently their airborne force. Los Angeles and other cities around the world are being bombarded by meteors that seem to be slowing down once they hit the earth's atmosphere. The earth is suddenly being invaded by space aliens that have landed off the shore of LA, and who begin killing everybody along the beach. The military is ordered into action. Marine Staff Sergeant Nantz (Aaron Eckhart), who was about to retire, is reassigned to a new platoon. The platoon, flown by chopper to the forward operating base at Santa Monica Airport, is being led by a new 2nd Lt. Martinez (Ramon Rodriguez). They are sent on a mission to rescue some civilians who are trapped at the police station within alien territory. They only have 3 hours to complete their mission and get out before the Air Force bombs that zone. Firstly, I am not a big fan of films where the bullets and bombs rain from the sky and destroy everyone the cars,people, sky scrapers except the main characters i.e heroes of the film. Phew, how unrealistic, 1 hour into the film while people were trying to kill the bad things, one thing I wasn't able to understand was, to whom the characters were trying to kill????.. I know aliens, but where were they???, I didn't see any alien shown clearly in the movie. It was such a bad film, actually bad is too small a word to describe how awful this movie is. How I wish I made some other plans that day, paying movie and 2hrs of torture.. that is what you get these days.

Advise: Don't watch this movie even on a rented DVD. The film revolves around an invasion by an unknown alien race, which start attacking the coastlines of some of the world's major cities. The majority of the West Coast of America has been taken and Los Angeles is next in line. A platoon of marines, with new Staff Sergeant Nantz (Aaron Eckhart) is sent in to rescue civilians who might be held up in a Police Station in Santa Monica. As you can imagine this is where the action starts with numerous machine gun fights and explosions.

This film was intended to be a war movie, with aliens in it, with the focus being on the soldiers in the platoon rather than the invading army (think Skyline but about the soldiers instead of the civilians). This was going to be achieved by putting the actors through three weeks of boot camp to make the result as realistic as possible. This worked very well, with the characters really looking and acting like marines should do, the only problem here is that apart from Nantz there is no depth to any of the other characters, making them all expendable and hard to care about. The worry going into this film however, was the realism of the invading army, but they did look and move like a real military unit, showing a parallel between the aliens and the humans.

The best comparison to this movie I can think of is to a video game. The key parts of the film are played out in big battle scenes and these are separated by poorly scripted conversations, which you just want to skip to get back to the action. There is plenty of unneeded back story as well (Nantz handing in his retirement just before the attack kicks off) which doesn't add anything to the plot, and about twenty minutes worth of what I can only call 'faff', which could quite easily be cut to make the film a much more manageable length. An example of one of these bits of 'faff' is just before someone is about to run over to another soldier, Nantz stops him, ties his shoelace and says "safety first". Most of the acting is astonishingly bad, making me think that in most of the scenes Jonathan Leibsman (the director) is holding up cue cards and the actors are just reading off lines. However Aaron Eckhart gives a strong performance, throwing everything into the role, even breaking his arm while shooting. It's good to see Eckhart in an action film after doing an amazing job in The Dark

Knight and Rabbit Hole (two more dramatic roles) to show how versatile he is and why he is a great addition to any cast. There are a lot of similarities between this film and Skyline (2010), for example, focusing on a particular group of people during an alien attack rather than giving a more general overview of the situation; the design of the alien ships are also very similar. This is probably due to Greg and Colin Strause directing Skyline and designing visual effects for Battle. This is risky, but it comes off well in the film.

In general this is a war film, which is too long, has too many pauses for conversation and not enough individuality of the minor characters (they could just be named 'grunt 1', etc)

For Fans of: Skyline; Independence Day.

Rating: 5/10 Mostly, this is the cinematic equivalent of a first-person shooter game, one where the Marines possess only slightly more personality than the faceless invaders. Nantz, Imlay, Lockett, Harris, Adukwu and Santos are the only survivors. a5c7b9f00b
